

Detention facilities in Albania used by KLA members and affiliates for inhuman treatment and illicit trafficking in human organs

Parliamentary Assembly
Committee on Legal Affairs and Human Rights
Rapporteur: Dick Marty, Switzerland, ALDE

KLA DETENTIONS IN WARTIME

At these locations, "prisoners of war" were detained, interrogated and inhumanely treated, up to the end of the Kosovo war in June 1999 (see section 3.3.1. of Report).

POST-CONFLICT DETENTIONS

From July 1999 to mid-2000, scores of "disappeared" persons were held in a separate ad hoc network of locations. All are presumed to have been killed. A small number became "victims of organised crime", their kidneys extracted for use by an international organ-trafficking ring (see section 3.3.2. of Report).

MOVEMENT OF CAPTIVES

Captives abducted from Kosovo were brought over the porous border. Gradually smaller numbers were "filtered" for onward transportation, including by ethnicity and health condition. Some captives passed through several "waystations" before being delivered to the end point operating clinic.

